SWIFT'S PRODUCE REVIEW

Every day is "Swat the Rooster" day on the farm now, causing a free marketing of old roosters. This will probably continue for a period of from two to four weeks. The marketing of old hens also is increasing, due to the fact that in most sections the flush egg production is over.

Production of butterfat is increasing rapidly and as a result there has been a freer movement of creamery butter to the large markets, causing prices to react to a lower basis. The production should show a further increase weekly for some time and this should have a tendency to cause somewhat lower price levels.

The warm weather in egg producing sections in the past few days has caused a better demand for more eggs from the northern sections and less inquiry for eggs from the southern states. It is estimated the reserve egg stocks in storage at present time are somewhat heavier than a year ago, and with the general quality now showing the effects of warmer weather, the tendency of the market may be lower. It is important that producers gather eggs daily, keep them in a cool place and market them frequently.

There is a good demand for all dressed poultry which should keep the market on a firm basis for some time.

CO-OPERATIVE SELLING GROWS IN KENTUCKY

(By Associated Press)

Lexington, Ky., May 15—Many co-operative selling organizations which have been established during the past few years indicate that farmers of the United States have realized the value of co-operative marketing according to a new circular on this subject written by C. B. Jesness, chief of the markets section of the Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station, which has just come off the press.

Outlining methods by which such organizations can be of help to farmers the author says: "They can grade and standardize products of members and sell them on the basis of grade, encouraging the production of high quality products. Combining products from a number of farms gives a volume of business which warrants the employment of trained and capable men to study market conditions and sell the products for the members. The bargaining power of strong organization also is much greater than that of an individual buyer."

"This does not mean that organization will enable farmers to overcome economic laws," the author continues. "Organized farmers cannot expect their organizations to obtain unreasonable high prices for their products since the purpose of organization is to sell the products in the best manner possible and to keep the members acquainted with market conditions and demands so that they may plan their farming operations intelligently."

Volume of business, good management, business methods, adequate finance and membership loyalty are pointed out as the important requirements for success in a co-operative marketing association. A copy of the Birmingham Co-operative Marketing act as passed by the recent session of the state legislature is contained in the publication.

The new circular, which is No. 115, is being distributed free to farmers interested in co-operative marketing.

Ashland Wheat in Morgan Co.

(By Associated Press)

West Liberty, Ky., May 15—With indications pointing toward a 1,500 bushel yield of Ashland wheat, farmers in this section of the state are well satisfied with the start they have made in growing this crop. R. B. Rankin, county agent of Morgan county, says, Ashland is a new pedigreed and high yielding variety of wheat developed at the Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station. Last fall Morgan county was one of the four leading counties in the number of bushels of wheat seeded from this variety, Mr. Rankin said.

The governor of Kentucky has $16,970 a year on which to run his office. Out of this comes his salary, contingent fund, salaries of the employees of the executive office and other office expenses. A bill requiring registration of pistols by their owners with the county clerks passed the lower house of the 1922 general assembly but did not reach the Senate.

RHODES PREDICTS GRAZING SEASON

(By Associated Press)

Lexington, Ky., May 15—The coming grazing season promises to be a slack one, according to Wayland Rhodes, beef cattle specialist of the College of Agriculture. As a result of conditions during the past two years, fewer cattle will be placed on grass to finish them off this year while many other feeders will reduce the size of their projects and feed only 50 to 60 cattle as compared to 100 they have been feeding in past years, he said.

While many feeders are showing an inclination to go slow on their operations for the coming year, other indications point to a better chance for profit for the cattle feeder. A lower price for feeder cattle, a fairly steady market and lower feed prices should do much toward making this year more profitable than the past two have been.

Feeders who made a profit in that time have been the exception rather than the rule he said. It has been difficult for the average feeder to make a profit of any kind, while many of them have experienced difficulty in realizing a market value for the feed which they fed.

Feeders who wish to put their steers on an early market and who have plenty of pasture need not feed cottonseed meal now, Mr. Rhodes pointed out. Early tender grass is rich in protein and when balanced with a daily feed of from four to six pounds of corn, results in good gains and an early market condition. Feeders who wish to carry their cattle thru until late summer for fattening will do best by feeding one or two pounds of cottonseed meal and from four to six pounds of corn a day from July on, Mr. Rhodes said. This will increase the gains and make better quality steers, he said. Stocker steers to be carried thru the summer and finished later need no extra grain or grass.

"This extra feeding is justified, where grass is short and the cattle were started on the grazing season in thin flesh to be placed on the market as fat cattle in the fall. Cottonseed meal should be fed only late in the season after the grass is mature, since it is not needed in early spring when the protein content of grass is high," he concluded.
